War Summary of The Latest Events

After backing and filling for many months Constantine of Greece has steered his course into the harbor of the Alliance. It is announced that "the Council of Greek Ministers has decided in agreement with King Constantine upon military co-operation with the Entente Powers." Constantine had but two courses open: to join the Allies on the demand of his people or abdicate. He has decided to stick to his throne and his people.
The Queen - a sister of the Kaiser - threatened some time ago to leave Greece forever if the Greeks took arms against Germany. There are many people in Athens who believe it would be a fine thing for Greece were she to keep her word.

The decision of Greece to join the Allies will not bring immediate military results. The army is disorganized and lacks supplies. It may not be able to take the field in great strength until the spring. By that time with the 300,000 veterans Greece can put into the campaign the Allies will crush Bulgaria like an eggshell, and lay siege to Constantinople early in the summer of 1917.

The statement of the Roumanian War Office that in the Dobrudja the German-Bulgar armies have been driven back with very great losses along their left front resting on the Danube as well as on the Black Sea coast, clears up the doubt that existed as to the actual situation in the Danubian sphere of operations. Mackensen has shot his bolt and failed. It is asserted in unofficial despatches, that the retreating Bulgars and Germans have been driven back to a point within twelve miles of the Varna-Rustchuk railway, but this seems incredible, indicating as it does a retirement of sixty miles since September 19th. A retreat so precipitate, if it really has taken place, could have but one object, the replenishment of supplies and munitions. After he left Dubric, some ten miles within Roumanian territory, and thirty miles north of Varna, von Mackensen had to depend entirely on motor and wagon transport. The country is flat and swampy and the roads most primitive. Only the seizure of the Constanza railway, with the bridge across the Danube at Chernavoda, could have justified Macken-sen's adventure. His failure brings down the entire plan of campaign of the Teutons in the Balkans.

The Bulgars are fighting with their accustomed tenacity in Southern Macedonia. From Paris comes news of fierce counter-attacks by them on

EXECUTORS' NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

In the estate of Cortland Homer Wartman, deceased.

Notice is hereby given pursuant to Chapter 121, of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1914, Section 36, and Amending Acts, that all persons having any claims or demands against the estate of Cortland Homer Wartman, late of the Town of Napanee, in the County of Lennox and Addington, dentist, deceased, who died on or about the 31st day of July, A. D. 1916, are required to deliver or send by post prepaid to U. M. Wilson, Napanee, Ontario, solicitor for Emma Wartman, executrix, of the last will and testament of the said Cortland Homer Wartman, deceased, on or before the 7th DAY OF OCTOBER, A. D. 1916, their christian and surnames, addresses and descriptions, with full particulars of their claims or demands duly verified, and the nature of the security (if any) held by them.

And further take notice that after the said 7th day of October, A. D. 1916, the said executrix may proceed to distribute the assets of the said estate amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims or demands of which she shall then have received notice, and will not be responsible for the said assets, or any part thereof so distributed, to any person or persons of whose claims or demands she shall not have received notice at the time of the distribution thereof.

the Teutons in the Balkans.

The Bulgars are fighting with their accustomed tenacity in Southern Macedonia. From Paris comes news of fierce counter-attacks by them on positions east of the Cerna held by the Serbs. Three successive assaults were made upon the heights to the east of that river recently won by the Serbs. All were beaten back with very heavy losses to the Bulgars.

The British army presses on eagerly toward Bapaume. Wednesday an advance was made on a front of 2,000 yards north of Flers, and a strong fortified position over a mile north-northeast of Thiepval was taken. The plan of General Haig appears to be to hold the Germans on the east along the line of Morval and Les Boeufs while the entire weight of the British army is thrown into the advance to the northeast along the Albert-Bapaume road. As there are no good defensive positions between Gen. Haig and his objective, Bapaume may fall before Peronne, which is still sheltered behind the immensely strong field works of Mont. St. Quentin.

The British troops took almost 5000 prisoners on Monday and Tuesday, of whom over a thousand were captured in Thiepval and the Zoulen field work. The total for the past two weeks is officially stated at 10,000. In Combes there were 1,500 German dead when the Allies entered the town. Only a few hundred of the garrison remained alive and most of them were wounded. The Thiepval garrison did not resist to the last as did that of Combes. Perhaps the "tanks" which again took an important part in the British advance, proved too formidable to be resisted. After rumbling into Thiepval the tanks evidently kept on going, for progress is reported to have been made during the night north of the village. The chief advance was in the direction of the village of Le Sars. It is reported that the Germans have begun to withdraw their batteries from the region of Grandcourt and the Valley of the Ancre.

The Germans attempted to come back Wednesday north of the Somme between Bouchavesnes and the Abbe Farm. The French front was subjected to a fierce artillery fire followed by a strong infantry attack. Not waiting to be assailed in their new positions, the French threw themselves upon the enemy and drove them back in disorder, taking 250 prisoners and 8 machine guns. The French front has been extended east and southeast of Rancourt, and the Wood of St. Pierre Vaast has been penetrated.

Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters sends out a despatch which indicates that the German front has been seriously shattered, and that fighting in the open field is a possibility of the near future. A patrol, he states—even the word cavalry has been mentioned—has been forward into positions where down to a few days ago no horseman could possibly have ventured.

Welland County Recruiting League passed a resolution calling upon the government for conscription, and will ask recruiting leagues throughout the Dominion to endorse this action.

No holiday is complete without a box of "Page & Shaw" or "Willards" Fork-Dipped Chocolates and a Kodak. WALLACE'S Drug Store Limited, agents for Napanee.

NAPANEE ASSESSMENT FOR 1917

MR. EDITOR,—

Mr. George Cliff, the assessor for Napanee, has returned his roll and it is now in the hands of the clerk of the corporation, open to be inspected by any person in Napanee interested, and as all persons are interested, it is hoped that as many as can conveniently do so, will inspect it with regard to their own properties.

The result of the assessment, is that the total assessment for Napanee, stands subject to corrections and revisions, at $1,654,447 and last year the total assessment was $1,399,107, making a net increase of $254,340.00, which roughly increases the assessed value of Napanee about one sixth and if the incoming council of 1917, collected and raised the same amount of taxes as this year, on the old assessment, the rate next year, on the new assessment, will be twenty-nine mills, or a fraction less and of course there is a chance always that the County Council will not place as they did this year, four thousand dollars ($4,000.00) extra county rate upon us, for Patriotic purposes and if this is not done, the rate next year, will be reduced to twenty-six mills.

The effect of increasing the assessment, you will notice, will not of itself, increase or reduce the taxes for next year that may have to be paid, but will reduce the rate on the dollar, so that the financial standing of Napanee, will appear to much better advantage to all outsiders, with the result that the selling value of real estate will be increased, throughout the town.

The population of Napanee, is about the same as last year, notwithstanding the fact that a large number of people have moved away or gone to the war, it being now 2881. The population next year, with the increased factory hands, coming in this winter, ought to run over three thousand. The school children between five and sixteen years, are reported as 558, an increase of 19 over last year. This of course does not include the school children, who come from points outside the limits of the corporation of the town and our school rolls would naturally show a larger number of school children, than does appear on the assessment roll.

The assessor has found 116 dogs, (male and female) and it will be a blessing if all other dogs in the town, which are not acknowledged to the assessor, are disposed of by the authorities.

I give you the above information as soon as it is available so that the rate payers may know the standing of the town, under the new assessment and what will be the effect next year, and that the rate payers should appreciate the energetic service they have received from our assessor.

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant.

VICTORY AT DOBRUDJA

Allies Have Taken the Town of Jenmita From the Bulgars.

The River Has Been Crossed at Three Points and Enemy Driven Back—Great Battle of Dobrudja Has Proven a Victory for the Russo-Roumanian Armies Which Are Again on the Offensive.

LONDON, Sept. 26. — British troops fighting along the Struma have crossed the river at three points and taken the town of Jenmita from the Bulgarians. The British official communication from Salonica dealing with the operations on the Macedonian front, issued here Sunday night, says:

"On the Struma front, having crossed the river at three places, our troops occupied Jenmita, which had been set on fire, driving the enemy before them, and attacked Kara Dzkobala, where they met with strong opposition. Our artillery entirely dispersed a counter-attack from Navel-Jen.

"East of Nemhor naval and field artillery successfully bombarded enemy trenches.

"On the Doiran front our patrols have shown great activity, but mist has hindered the artillery work."

British troops Saturday attacked strong Bulgarian forces north of Kopriva, in Greek Macedonia, says an official French statement issued Sunday. The Serbians made progress north-west of Kaimakalan and took some prisoners. Northwest of Florina the French forces advanced and repulsed a strong Bulgarian attack on Hill 1,550.

The tide has turned in favor of the Allies in the great battle in the Dobrudja. Once more the Roumanian and Russian troops are on the offensive and are driving Macken-sen's army back toward the Bulgarian border.

By smashing at the flanks of the enemy—one along the Danube and the other resting on the Black Sea coast—the allied troops are forcing his whole line back. Under a decided disadvantage on account of the increasing length of his line as he retreats, the German commander is vainly trying to strike back.

If this report is true, the victory of the Roumanians is far greater than official communications indicate. The northernmost point on the Danube touched by the invaders was Marleanu, north-east of Olina Lake. From there to Silistria it is 30 miles, the extent of the Bulgars' retreat, if there is basis for the Rome report.

Army authorities here are inclined to discount this rumor, however, as well as the statement by Berlin that all of the Roumanian attacks have ended in failure. The main thing is that the blows of Mackensen evidently have failed to crumple in the line guarding Constanza and the sole railroad approach into Roumania from Dobrudja.

Sunday's news tends to disprove the assertions of the Berlin and Sofia War Offices that in Thursday's desperate fighting the Roumanian flanks were turned and the army routed. If Mackensen had cut through the Roumanian lines on both wings he would have been able to roll the centre of the army back

ANOTHER ZEPPELIN RAID.

Casualties and Damage Reported—Full Reports Not Yet Received.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A second air raid was attempted by the Germans over England Monday night, following their expedition of last Saturday night. Several zeppelins, probably as many as six, visited the northeastern and southern counties. They dropped bombs on the northern counties, inflicting casualties and doing damage. Details are not yet available of the destruction done.
An airship was seen off the south coast.

Advices were received from Tilbury that the debris of a third zeppelin was picked up in the North Sea after the raid on Saturday night.

A Copenhagen despatch says that Danish fishermen saw four zeppelins traveling in a southeasterly direction on Sunday. One was damaged, and it was being escorted by destroyers.
"Several hostile airships crossed the east and north-east coasts of England between 10.30 o'clock and last night," says an official communication issued shortly after midnight Monday.

"Bombs are reported to have been dropped at several places in northern and north Midland counties.

"An airship is also reported off the south coast.

"No reports of casualties or damage have been received."

Later the following official statement concerning the air raid was made public:

Several hostile airships—probably six—visited the north-eastern and southern counties during Monday night. Bombs were dropped in the northern counties, and some casualties and damage are reported.

Full reports have not yet been received.

Britain Regrets Seizure.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. — Informal expressions of regret have been made by Great Britain to the State Department for seizure at Hongkong of American-owned goods consigned to Manila on board the steamers Chinese Prince, Fafue, and Aymeric. It was learned Monday that in response to a vigorous protest by the U. S. assurances had been given that there would be no more such seizures. The British action first was explained on the ground that the goods were consigned to blacklisted firms. Later it was claimed that several of the firms were ringleaders in a junta alleged to be seeking to cause a rebellion in India.

Eight Hundred Casualties Daily.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—The casualty lists are exceedingly heavy, and at the rate they have come in during the past fortnight the ten thousand figure will soon be reached. As the result of the recent severe fighting on the Somme, a particularly large number of officers are being reported killed or wounded.

The reports are now being received at the rate of about eight hundred a day. The notification of relatives, coupled with thousands of queries for particulars keep the record office staff busy night and day. The rush is so great that these queries, where cabling is necessary, can be answered only with considerable delay.

Give Up Men Kidnaped at Kavala.

Sept. 26.—A Reuter's man Amsterdam says that a telegram from Berlin Minister in Berlin, in a confidential conversation with German Foreign Secretary Jagow, intimated that the government would be pleased if it would soon transport the men, who surrendered at Switzerland, whence they returned to Greece.

The German Foreign Secretary in Germany was adhering to an agreement to treat the men as guests, and also was to the desire of the Greek government for their return, but and efficient guarantees provided that the troops now in protection are not to be by the Entente while some, nor to be punished and neutral feelings.

Starkovgrob, part of the Tzouka fortress system guarding one side of the valley leading from Florina to Monastir, has been brought under heavy fire from the Serbian batteries.

On the Kaimawcalan plateau itself the Serbians were able to push forward to a depth of from 200 to 300 metres, according to another despatch from Salonica. Their advance was in the face of strong Bulgarian resistance. The Bulgarians had just received fresh reinforcements at this point.

JOURNALISTS JAILED.

They Criticized Conduct of Manitoba Agricultural College Probe.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 26.—Edward Beck, managing editor of The Winnipeg Telegram, was sent to the common jail for one month and fined $500 by Mr. Justice Galt Saturday morning for contempt of court. Mr. Beck refused to answer any questions or to take the oath when summoned to explain an article in his paper criticizing the conduct of the Agricultural College Commission, over which Judge Galt presided. B. R. Deacon, news editor of The Telegram, was sent to jail for two weeks and fined $100. Stanley Beck, a reporter on the same paper, was committed to jail for one month. Knox Magee, editor of The Saturday Post, for contempt was committed to jail for one month and fined $500.

Four hours later the newspapermen were released by Mr. Justice Haggart of the Court of Appeal, on an application for a writ of habeas corpus.

They were not asked to furnish bail. The writ was made returnable on Saturday, when the Crown will attend before Judge Haggart to argue the legality of Judge Galt's commitment.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A despatch to Reuters' Telegram Co. from Salonica says:

"The Entente Allies began at 7 o'clock Monday morning a vigorous offensive on the extreme left westward and northward of Florina. There was fighting all day long. The Russians shortly after noon captured an important hill west of Florina, the French advanced, occupying the Village of Petorak, while the Serbians succeeded in crossing the frontier northeast of Krusograd, but entered fierce opposition at Verbeni."

Germans Stunned by Loss of Zepps.
NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A News Agency despatch from Geneva Monday, says:

"Loss of the two zeppelins in Saturday night's air raid on England has stunned the Berlin public. Swiss correspondents in the German capital telegraphed to-day:

"No recent reverse on the battlefield has had such a depressing effect on the German people, the correspondents reported."

The two zeppelins are understood to have been among the new aircraft turned out recently at the Friedrichshafen factory.

Another Hydro Reduction Promised.

HAMILTON, Sept. 26.—Assurance was given by T. J. Stewart, M.P., chairman of the local hydro commission, Monday that there was to be another reduction in the cost of hydro, and that it would become effective in November. The hydro completes its year in October, and Mr. Stewart stated that he expected to see a surplus of $30,000. The street lighting surplus will as usual be returned to the city.

Venizelos and Officers Leave Athens.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The situation in Greece is most serious, says a Reuter despatch from Athens. Former Premier Venizelos, accompanied by Rear Admiral Condouris, commander-in-chief of the Greek navy, a number of superior officers and his supporters, left Athens early Monday. They are bound probably for Crete, whence they are expected to go to Salonica.

Antiquity of Passports.

Passports are a very ancient institution. Some of the old monkish chroniclers mention as an achievement on the part of King Canute that he obtained free passes for his subjects through various continental countries on their pilgrimages to the shrines of the apostles Peter and Paul at Rome. Each pilgrim was furnished with a document in the nature of a passport called "Tructurin de Itinere Peragenta." Hall in his "Chronicle" makes reference to a system of passports in the time of Edward IV., and the enforcement of this system is known to have been very strict in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I.—London Mail.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 26. The bill providing for a referendum on compulsory military service in Australia, which recently was adopted by the House of Representatives, passed the Senate on the third reading. The vote was 17 to 9.

Too Sensitive.

It was the first night after the show. The leading woman's mother was downcast.

"What's the trouble, dear?" asked the leading woman in surprise. "I made a brilliant hit tonight."

The old lady was surprised.

"Did you, Sophie? I heard the audience shouting 'Play right! Play right!' and I thought you had failed."

And the leading woman laughed in amusement.

"Why, my dear, they were shouting 'Playwright! Playwright!'"

FREAKS OF NATURE

We Know There Are Giants, but We Do Not Know Why.

THEY ARE A SORT OF PUZZLE.

Sometimes These Titans Are the Result of a Somewhat Mysterious Disease Called Gigantism—Og and Goliath and the Giant Races of Gath.

Giants and dwarfs abound in the region of the Caucasus mountains. Now, why are some people big and some little? In families heredity seems to govern the matter. Where races are concerned it is not so easily explained. We are accustomed, by the way, to think of the Chinese as of inferior height; but that is because our Chinese immigrants nearly all come from the south of China. The people of north China are tall and occasionally approach the gigantic.

Circus giants are not uncommonly sufferers from a disease called gigantism, which in the long run is inevitably fatal. It appears to be due to something wrong with a small gland at the base of the brain, which, in a mysterious way, governs growth. A strange thing about this affliction is that the victim may be attacked long after he has become adult and has ceased to grow in a normal way. A man over thirty years of age may suddenly become a giant, the first warning he gets of the fact being the discovery that he needs a larger hat and bigger boots and gloves.

There are, however, occasional giants who are simply people of extraordinary size, in other respects normal. How to account for them nobody knows unless by calling them freaks of nature. Much more remarkable are the giant families which are found in the Caucasus region, though most individuals of such families are not big enough to be worth while for show purposes. For circus exhibition a giant ought not to be less than seven feet six inches tall. With that stature, plus boots with thick soles and a high hat, a man may be safely advertised as touching the eight foot mark.

Such giant families are not unknown in history. Josephus and other profane historians indorse the statements found in many places in the Bible in regard to the giants of Gath, from which locality, it will be remembered, Goliath hailed. The Bible puts the stature of that redoubtable champion at "six cubits and a span"—in other words, about three inches short of ten feet. This would seem to be the altitude record for a human being, even allowing that the measurement was from the ground to the crest of Goliath's helmet.

The most celebrated of all the giant breed, not excepting Goliath, was Og, king of Bashan. At the time when the wanderings of the Israelites in the wilderness were brought to a close he was ruler over no fewer than sixty cities "fenced with high walls, gates and bars." His indeed was a powerful monarchy, and the conquest of his realm by Moses is looked upon to this day as one of the greatest events in Jewish history.

SECRET OF A MOTHER BIRD.

How Does the Chimney Swift Get Her Brood Up the Flue?

In the autumn chimney swift nests often made the chimney smoke, and they had to be fished out or knocked down by lowering a pine branch on a rope from the roof.

Once upon a time, of course, these swallows built in hollow trees. But a pair of them, flying over Plymouth in 1621, spied something which looked like a new kind of tree, and the breed was on its way to a new procedure.

Possibly the fact that chimneys are safer from squirrels, coons, owls and other possible enemies was a factor in determining the change. Then, too, it is undoubtedly easier to find chimneys today than hollow trees. I well remember, as a boy, hearing a noise in one of our chimneys and pulling out the stovepipe hole cap in my chamber. There, directly opposite the opening, perched on a protruding brick, a swift was building a nest of sticks!

I watched the whole process, fascinated by the sticky mucilage which the bird secreted in her salivary glands to fasten the sticks together, and after the mother was sitting gradually got her so tame—or, rather, sufficiently subdued her wildness—that she would remain occasionally on the nest when the cap was removed. My great desire was to see how she got the young birds up the chimney after they were large enough to leave the nest, but, alas, that feat was accomplished one day when I wasn't looking! I felt certain then that she must have carried them up in her bill, though I was laughed at for my belief.

Has any one observed a chimney swift getting her young up the flue? Curiously enough, I myself have never had another chance to watch.—Walter Prichard Eaton in Harper's Magazine.

"Yes, please."

Women in the Trades.

Our medieval forefathers were quite accustomed to women workers in many of the trades. Chaucer and Langland use many words with characteristic feminine suffixes, which indicate the trades then open to them, as, for instance, baxteres (female bakers) and souteresse (female shoemaker). There were also female candlemakers, wig-makers and bookbinders, and in an act of 1454 complaints are noticed of the women silk manufacturers of London against the Lombard merchants.—London Globe.

HELD BY A MANIAC

Plight of a Steeplejack Atop a Towering Church Spire.

WHEN HIS HELPER WENT MAD.

The Struggle For Life In Midair and the Lucky Incident That Enabled Merrill to Overcome the Cunning Lunatic in His Death Grapple.

In Cleveland Moffett's "Careers of Danger and Daring" is this incident of real life that was told to Mr. Moffett by Merrill, the famous steeplejack, to whom it occurred.

"Did you ever have an impulse to jump off a steeple?" I questioned, recalling the sensations of many people in looking down even from a housetop.

"I've kept pretty free from that," said he, "but there's no doubt climbing steeples does tell on a man's nerves. Now, there was Dan O'Brien. He had an impulse to jump off a steeple one day and a strong impulse too. He went mad on one of the tallest spires in Cincinnati, right at the top of it."

"Went mad?"

"Yes, sir, raving mad, and I was by him when it happened. I forget whether the church was Baptist or Presbyterian, but I know it stood on Sixth street, near Vine, and there was a big hand on top of the steeple with the forefinger pointing to heaven.

"We were putting fresh gilding on this hand. I was working on the thumb side and O'Brien on the little finger side, both of us standing on tiny stagings about the size of a chair seat and both of us made fast to the steeple by life lines under our arms. That's an absolute rule in climbing steeples—never to do the smallest thing unless you're secured by a life line.

"It was coming on dark, and I was hurrying to get the gold leaf on, because we'd given the hand a fresh coat of sirting that would be dry before morning. We hadn't spoken for some time, when suddenly I heard a laugh from O'Brien's side that sent a shiver down my spine. Did you ever hear a crazy man laugh? Well, if ever you do you'll remember it. I looked at him and saw by his face that something was wrong.

"What are you doing?" said I.

"He answered very polite and steady like, but his tone was queer. 'I'm trying to figure out how long it would take a man to get down if he went the fastest way.'

"I thought I had better keep him in a good humor, so I said, 'I'll tell you what, Dan, you brace up and get this gold on, and then we'll race to the ground in our saddles.'

"That's a fair idea," said he in a shrill voice, 'but I've got a better one. We'll race down without any saddles; yes, sir, without any lines, without a blamed thing.'

"Don't be a fool, Dan. What you want to do is to get that gold on—quick." I tried to speak sharp.

"No, sir; I'm going to jump, and so are you."

"I caught his eye just then and saw it wasn't any time to bother about

Whatever the circumstances under which the giant breed existed in Palestine at the time of the first arrival of the Israelites, it is certain that in later years they were scattered about among other peoples. In a political sense some were Hittites and yet others Amorites.

Coming into contact with other races they became, it would seem, either extinct or subordinate. From what little is said of them in history it is to be inferred that they were mentally inferior, though formidable fighters by reason of their great size and strength in an age when mere bodily prowess counted for much.

If Goliath be supposed to have been eight and one-half feet high (allowing for helmet and crest) his stature did not exceed that of the celebrated Winckelmeyer, the tallest man of modern times, who, born in Bavaria, died not so many years ago. The height of many giants has been exaggerated, but Winckelmeyer was carefully measured by the anthropologist Doubes.

A man of less than eight and one-half feet could hardly have worn the enormously heavy armor and accouterments described in the first book of Samuel as composing Goliath's outfit. The staff of his spear, we are told, was "like a weaver's beam," the iron spearhead alone weighing 600 shekels, about twenty pounds.

The giant breed in Palestine apparently died out not very long before the birth of Christ.

There have been lesser giant breeds in modern times, but in some instances they have been the result of artificial selection, as, for example, in the case of the wrestlers of Nippon, who, seen in a crowd, stand head and shoulders above the ordinary Japanese.

In the neighborhood of Potsdam there are today many very tall people owing to the fact that King Frederick William's famous regiment of giants was long stationed there. The regiment numbered 2,400 soldiers, and all Europe was searched by the monarch for big men to serve in it.

The Turkey Wing.

Did you know that you can start a fire by blowing it with a turkey's wing better than any other way in the world? The Indian women keep turkey wings for that purpose, and they say that once upon a time nearly all the fire of the earth had gone out, and the birds were sent to look for some little that was left up in the air. The turkey found some and fanned it with its wing until there was a blaze that burnt the top of the turkey's head and left the blisters that you can still see there. It burnt its wings, too, and ever after the Indian women have used the wings for this purpose.

True Blue.

The expression "true blue," which we hear so often, has not even an English parentage, but is said to have been a Spanish saying which meant that the blood that filled the veins of the aristocracy of Spain was blue in color, while that of the inferior mortals was more or less black, and the proverb that "true blue will never stain" instead of meaning, as it is generally supposed, that "a noble heart will never disgrace itself," actually refers to the "blue aprons" worn by butchers on account of their not showing blood stains—a far jump this from the blue blood of the haughty Spanish aristocrat to the humble apron of a butcher's boy.—London Express.

JAPAN'S SENSE OF HUMOR.

It Seems to Be Too Subtle For Occidental Minds to Master.

Japan was the first foreign country where I saw moving pictures shown. In Yokohama one whole street is given up to moving pictures—Theater street. Great banners hung clear across it with the picturesque Japanese alphabet racing up and down them advertise the respective performances.

On the floor the audience sits, with their feet squarely turned under them, absorbed in the shifting shadows. The subtitles are in English, but so common is English coming to be in Japan that the meaning doesn't go over their heads. There is always some one to whisper the title's meaning.

American manufacturers have labored long and hard to find films that will amuse the Japanese, but their success has not been very marked. No white mind can fathom a Japanese's sense of humor. Our funniest films over there go flat. But in the midst of a death scene in some dramatic film they will suddenly begin to rock with merriment. There is a fortune in it for any one who will locate the Japanese bump of humor and manufacture plays that will hit it.

The Japanese are now manufacturing their own films, but they are not of much interest to white people, as nothing ever happens in them. There is no action. Half a reel may be given up to drinking a cup of tea. But this may be exceedingly funny to the Japanese, for there has been more going on than shows on the surface. By the way they lift their cups, by the way they swing their fan they are passing a message. Two Japanese can talk to each other with their fans, while the white man standing alongside understands nothing of what they are saying.—World Outlook.

want to do is to get that gold on quick." I tried to speak sharp.

"I caught his eye just then and saw it wasn't any time to bother about gold leaf. I reached up and eased the hitch of my line around the hand so I could swing toward him. I knew if I once got my grip on him he wouldn't make any more trouble. But I'd never had a crazy man to deal with, and I didn't realize how tricky and quick they are. While I was working around to his side and thinking he didn't notice it he was laying for me out of the corner of his eye, and the first thing I knew he had me by the throat and everything was turning black. I let go of the line and dropped back on my saddle board helpless, and if it hadn't been for blind luck I guess the people down below would have got their money's worth in about a minute. But my hand struck the tool box as he pressed me back, and I had just strength enough left to shut my fingers on the first tool I touched and strike at him with it. The tool happened to be a monkey wrench, and when a man gets a clip on the head with a thing like that he's pretty apt to keep still for awhile. And that's what O'Brien did. He keeled over and lay there, and I did, too, until my head got steady. Even then I guess we'd both have fallen if it hadn't been for the life lines.

"The rest was simple enough after I got my senses back. Dan was unconscious, and all I had to do was fasten a rope to him and lower away. They took care of him down below until the ambulance came, and he spent that night in a hospital. And he's spent most of his years since then in an asylum, his mind all gone except for short periods, when he comes to himself again, and then he always starts out to put an end to me. That last impulse to destroy me has never left him."

Not in His Line.

A society for disseminating religious literature once sent a bundle of tracts to a railway manager for placing in the waiting room with the title, "A Route to New Jerusalem." He returned them, with the message, "We cannot place the tracts, as New Jerusalem is not on our system."—London Tit-Bits.

HIS TWO BAD DAYS.

Lord Byron Had a Positive Dread of Fridays and Sundays.

The belief in palmists and sooth-sayers is not, as is sometimes supposed, confined to the ignorant and the credulous. Lord Byron was not a skeptic in these matters. Just before his death, as recorded in "Byron—The Last Phase," by Richard Edgewood,
"he said he had reflected a great deal on a prediction which had been made to him when a boy by a famed fortune teller in Scotland.

"His mother, who firmly believed in chirromancy and astrology, had sent for this person and desired him to inform him what would be the future destiny of her son. Having examined attentively the palm of his hand, the man looked at him for awhile steadfastly and then with a solemn voice exclaimed, 'Beware of your thirty-seventh year, my young lord, beware!'

"He had entered on his thirty-seventh year on Jan. 22, and it was evident from the emotion with which he related this circumstance that the caution of the palmist had produced a deep impression on his mind, which in many respects was so superstitious that we thought it proper to accuse him of superstition.

"To say the truth," answered his lordship, "I find it equally difficult to know what not to believe. * * * You will, I know, ridicule my belief in lucky and unlucky days, but no consideration can now induce me to undertake anything either on a Friday or a Sunday. I am positive it would terminate unfortunately. Every one of my misfortunes—God knows I have had my share—has happened to be on one of those days."

HORSES IN BATTLE.

Methods of the Days When Chariots
Were Used in Warfare.

In the old days when the Romans and Greeks fought furious battles the charioteers drove their cars in all directions, hurled their javelins and by the din and clatter of horses and wheels commonly threw the ranks of the enemy into disorder and, making their way among the squadrons of the enemy's cavalry, leaped down from their chariots and fought on foot.

The charioteers then withdrew little by little out of the fight and placed their chariots in such a way that if they were hard pressed they could readily retreat to their own side. Thus in battle they afforded the mobility of cavalry with the steadiness of infantry.

Daily practice enabled them to pull up their horses at full speed when on a steep slope or to run out on the pole and stand on the yoke and to get nim-bly back into the chariot.

With the introduction of cavalry in the later iron age came larger horses, but their use for this purpose seems to have been restricted to isolated areas.

There is no doubt that the west German tribes as late as the campaign of Caesar in Gaul used only the shaggy pony. It is said in cavalry actions they held it disgraceful and slothful to use any kind of saddle, and instead of charging in squadrons they dismounted and fought on foot.

As far as England is concerned the art of riding seems to have been introduced by the Normans. The Saxons appear to have been but indifferent horsemen.

Dickens' Last Letter.

The last paragraph of the last letter written by Charles Dickens read:

But I hope I may be ready at 3 o'clock.
If I can't be—why, then I shan't be. Ever affectionately. C. D.

This was written an hour or so before the fatal seizure. Every word drips below the level from which each starts, each line of writing descends across the page, the simple C. D. is very shaky, and the whole letter is broken and weak. Charles Dickens was not "ready" at "3 o'clock." He died at ten minutes past 6 p. m.

A Woman's Solace.

"Silas, I often think of the time when you came courting—it's a woman's solace. And when I entered the room you hastened to assist me to a chair—near your own. And now I select my own chair."

"Yes, Samantha, I remember it. I was always afraid you would stumble and fall and have fidgets. But I learned long ago that you are able to take care of yourself."

"And also of you, Silas."

Gnats on Beaches.

The beaches of Snails Island, in the gulf of Mexico, change color twice daily with the tides. The sands are really of a golden color, and when the rising tide spreads the wide beach still remains gold, but when the tide ebbs they look quite purple, and this is accounted for by myriads of tiny purple snails crawling in the wake of the ebbing tide. It is to these snails that the island owes its name.

Origin of Music.

The origin of music is lost in antiquity. Among civilized people it probably originated among the Egyptian priests, who employed this art in their religious rites and ceremonies. From the Egyptians the art passed on to the Greeks and Romans and so on to modern nations.—New York American.

A King's Ransom.

The expression "worth a king's ransom," though generally supposed to mean the ransoms paid for a king, more probably refers to that paid to a king. In early times, when armies received practically no regular pay and the soldier's reward was the booty taken from the vanquished, each soldier had a right to the bodies as well as the goods of the prisoners he captured.
The conqueror might slay his prisoner, sell him to slavery or set him at liberty on payment of a ransom. But, though it was the common practice in feudal times for the individual captor to receive the ransom for prisoners of low degree, those for princes or great nobles were always paid to the king;
hence a king's ransom.

Foxhounds.

Foxhounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in six and one-half minutes, which was at the rate of nearly eighteen yards a second.

Bread Making Contests At Rural School Fairs

PRIZES—Free Courses at Macdonald Institute, Guelph Free Poultry Raising Courses at Ontario Agricultural College
Free Cook Books and Magazines

Over 1,500 prizes in all will be offered in bread-making contests which will be held this fall at over 250 rural school fairs taking place in Ontario. It will be a great event at the fairs and will stimulate interest in bread-making among young girls between the ages of 12 and 17 years.

Here is a wonderful opportunity for your daughter to win for herself a Free Course in Domestic Science at the famous Macdonald Institute, Guelph. All she has to do is to bake one double loaf of bread and enter it in the contest at the fair according to the conditions explained below and more fully told in the folder we will send you on request. The loaf must be baked with Cream^{of the} West Flour the hard wheat flour guaranteed for bread.

This is a splendid flour which makes the biggest, bulging loaves—whitest, lightest and most wholesome bread you ever baked. Is this not a splendid opportunity to interest your daughters in breadmaking?

Here are the Splendid Prizes offered for the best loaf of bread baked with Cream of the West Flour. The following are offered at each local fair:

1st Prize.—1 paid-up subscription to "My Magazine" for 1 year. This magazine is full from cover to cover every month with articles suitable for young people of all ages. It is published in England. Value $2.50 per year.
2nd Prize.—6 months paid-up subscription to "My Magazine." Value $1.25.

Extra Prizes.—When entries exceed ten a 3rd prize will be awarded of 6 mos. paid-up subscription to "My Magazine." When the number of entries exceeds twenty the judges at the fair will award 4th, 5th, and 6th prizes of one year's paid-up subscriptions to "The Little Paper." This is a wonderful little publication issued every month in England. Its eight pages are packed with highly engaging information and stories relating to history, nature-study, animals, bird-life, etc.

Important—The winners of 1st prizes at the fairs automatically become competitors for the Provincial Prizes. The second half of the double loaf is sent to Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, by the district representative in special container provided. The judging is done by Miss M. A. Purdy of the Department of Breadmaking and Flour Testing at the College.

Provincial Prizes—The winners of first prize at each local fair compete for following Provincial prizes. The first and second prizes, or third and fourth prizes, will not be awarded in any one county:

1st Prize.—Short Course (3 months) in Domestic Science at Macdonald Institute, Guelph. The Macdonald Institute does not accept students under the age of 17 years; if the winner be less than 17 we present her with a certificate entitling her to take the course when she reaches the right age. Value of course $75.00, which pays for fees, room, board and washing. The winner lives at Macdonald Hall while taking course.

2nd Prize.—Short Course (3 months) in Domestic Science at Macdonald Institute, Guelph.

3rd Prize.—Short Course (4 weeks) in Poultry Raising at Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Girls taking this course do not live at the College, but good boarding houses will be secured for them in Guelph. Value of course $35.00, which pays board of student in Guelph. (No fees are charged for course.)

4th Prize.—Short Course (4 weeks) in Poultry Raising at the Ontario Agricultural College.

5th to 20th Prizes.—The Famous Boston Cooking-school Cook Book by Fannie Merritt Farmer, latest edition (1914). There are 2117 thoroughly tested recipes and 130 photographic reproductions of dishes, etc., besides much special information.

Conditions of the Contest

Every girl may compete at the rural school fair in her district, whether or not she attends school, providing that her 12th birthday occurs before November 1st, 1916, or her 17th birthday does not occur before Nov. 1, 1916. One loaf of bread must be submitted baked in pan about 7 x 5 inches and 3 inches deep, and divided into two loaves so that they may be separated at the fair. The loaf must be baked with Cream of the West Flour. One half will be judged at the fair. The other half first prize loaf will be sent to Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, to compete in the Provincial Contest. The local contest at the fair will be conducted under the same rules as all the other regular contests at your fair.

The standard by which bread will be judged will be as follows:

|----------------------------|----------|
| 1. Appearance of Loaf..... | 15 marks |
| (a) Color..... | 5 marks |
| (b) Texture of crust..... | 5 marks |
| (c) Shape of loaf..... | 5 marks |
| 2. Texture of Crumb..... | 40 marks |
| (a) Evenness..... | 15 marks |
| (b) Silkiness..... | 20 marks |
| (c) Color..... | 5 marks |
| 3. Flavor of Bread..... | 45 marks |
| (a) Taste..... | 25 marks |
| (b) Odor..... | 20 marks |

Each loaf must be accompanied by the part of the flour bag containing the face of the Old Miller (important) and an entry form must be signed by the girl and parents or guardian stating date of birth, P.O. address, and giving name of dealer from whom Cream of the West Flour was purchased. The form will state that the girl actually baked the loaf entered in the competition. The forms will be provided at the time of the fair. The decision of the judges is final. Not more than one entry may be made by each girl and not more than one prize will be awarded to the same family.

The Results of the contests at the fair will be made known in the usual way as in the case of all the other regular contests. The Provincial results will be announced as soon as possible after the conclusion of the Rural School Fairs in the Province.

Do Not Miss this Great Opportunity: Every girl between 12 and 17 years should compete. What a splendid way to stir up increased interest in breadmaking! Get a supply of Cream of the West Flour at your dealers and practise using it as often as possible to increase the chances of winning. If your dealer cannot sell it to you, write to the Campbell Flour Mills Co., Ltd., Toronto, and they will promptly tell you the nearest place to get it.

No Competitions in Counties Named Below:

The competition is open to all parts of the province where Rural School Fairs are held, except the districts of Rainy River, Kenora, Manitoulin and Thunder Bay. These districts are the only parts of the province where school fairs are held by the Department of Agriculture in which this competition will not be a feature. There are no district-representatives of the Department of Agriculture in the Counties of Huron, Perth, Wellington, Haliburton, Prescott, Russell or Lincoln, and no rural school fairs are held in these Counties by the Department of Agriculture. We regret, therefore, that the competition cannot include these Counties.

Write for free folder giving full and complete information about every feature of this great contest.

Chapter I.O.D.E.
Napanee, Ont.

Dear Madam,—Very many thanks for the case of supplies which arrived safely. Please convey our thanks to the members of the "United Empire Loyalists" Chapter and Committee. All the articles are useful, and it was very kind of you all to think of us.

The hospital is a very luxurious and comfortable one, and the patients all love it, as it is the only Canadian hospital for officers in London.

We have mostly Canadians, who appreciate it very much. Many thanks for your kind congratulations. I was very fortunate to be on the spot when His Majesty was hurt. It was a rather wonderful experience in every way.

I cannot tell you how all the splendid work done by the women of Canada is appreciated over here. At our Canadian hospitals at the front we seldom lack anything we need to work with, and it is very largely due to the articles sent over by the Canadian Red Cross.

Thanking you again, and wishing you all success in your splendid work, I am

Very sincerely yours,
VIVIEN E. TREMAINE,
Matron I.O.D.E. Hospital, London.

Our readers may recall the fact that Miss Tremaine, for her services to the wounded in France, and for her care of His Majesty both there, and afterwards at Buckingham Palace, was later decorated by the King with the Royal Red Cross, an Order conferred only upon women for brave and devoted service, being the more highly prized from the fact that it is only bestowed for exceptional services.

We are not unpacking the case but sending it straight to Saloniki this week. Dr. Stewart has written for more equipment to be sent out. Her unit has been moved from Saloniki to the fighting line, so I am sure your kind gift will be most welcome to them there. With many thanks.

BURIED ALIVE TWICE, SOLDIER LOST SPEECH

Kingston, Sept. 26th—Twice buried alive and once blown up in the air, is the experience of Pte. T. F. Holland of Kingston, who has lost his speech and is now in a hospital in England. He went overseas with the 58th Battalion. In writing his brother he says:

"We were in the big battle on the Somme. The Germans gave us murderous shellfire all day, blowing our trench to pieces. I was standing up in the trench, when I heard one big shell coming very near so I dropped flat in the trench just as it landed among us. It killed three men who were alongside of me and I was buried. It took them about ten minutes to dig me out, and when I got out I had lost my speech and have not been able to talk since, but I expect it will come back in time. I have seen some great sights in the battlefield. I saw one big Scotchman rushing for eight Germans, and he killed everyone of them alone. Then he started to smoke a cigarette just as if nothing had happened."

SPOILED HIS SYS

He Thought It Couldn't Be
He Is Wiser Now

I know a man who wears in chronological order—that buys a new shirt he tags initials, numbers it and places bottom of the pile. And, no much he likes it, he does until it comes out at the top. He went into wordy detail economy of his system, and that he arranged his shirts wear in the same manner.

I told him that he would woman of his dreams some and that she would knock the of his system. I told him would admire a particular's its delicate stripes lovingly, why he didn't wear it often then he would send it to as soon as it was soiled as as soon as it got back, and buy other shirts like it, and forget the system.

"Don't you believe it!" he person doesn't live who could system!"

But I met him a few days the first time in a year. He trying to catch a car, so I had to ask him how he was and were going. And he didn't to explain. He only shouted shoulder jubilantly, "I'm w every which way!"

And I hadn't even heard him ried.

Crossing the Bar.

Tennyson's famous poem "the Bar" was written, said the poet's eighty-first year in October when we came from to Farringford. Before rearingford he had had the "the bar" in his mind, and as he showed me the poem w "That is the crown of your life said his son, who was the after the poet to read "Cr Bar" and who passed the cism upon it in such fitting ous language. "It came in a said the poet, and he explain lot as the Divine and Unso always guiding us. A day fore he died the poet, calling his bedside, said, "Mind you ing the Bar" at the end of a of my poems."

CHARM OF BIOGRAPHY.

It Leads the Reader Into Quaint and Delightful Byways.

Reading biography will furnish you with a peculiar and rare form of entertainment, for besides the subject in hand biography legitimately treats of the foibles, the fashions and the peculiarities of the age with which it deals, says Youth's Companion. History, although it may have its lighter moments, is essentially sober, but biography, although it is never merely farcical or satirical, may touch vividly upon the lighter phases of life and take you, as it were, into quaint and delightful byways, through private parks and into remote and lovely fields.

"Indeed," wrote Boswell in his introduction to his famous biography. "I cannot conceive a more perfect mode of writing any man's life than by not only relating the most important events of it in their order, but by interweaving what he privately wrote and said and thought, by which mankind are enabled, as it were, to see him live and to live o'er each scene with him as he actually advanced through the several stages of his life."

Biography, treated in that manner, must inevitably include much that is delightfully diverting. It will give you "the table talk of the great;" it will recount those fascinating little incidents and anecdotes that history so often regards as beneath its notice. It will afford far more than a running account of a life, "beginning with a pedigree and ending with a funeral."

CONTRASTS IN ICELAND.

A Curious Land of Fire and Ice, of Volcanoes and Glaciers.

Iceland is known as a "land of contrasts." The land of Iceland boasts in comparatively small compass fire and ice, volcanoes, glaciers and geysers. There is magnificent scenery in its desolate plateaus. It has more than 100 volcanoes, of which the largest is Hecla, 5,100 feet high. There are thousands of craters in Iceland, the chief among them being Askya, with an area of thirty-four square miles.

Of glaciers there are more than 120, with aggregate areas of about 5,200 square miles. The largest is Vatna. Not far from Hecla is the so called geyser region, where there are many hot springs. The Great Geyser is sixty feet in diameter. One geyser was found to have water at a temperature of 262 degrees F., which makes it possibly the hottest spring in the world. One-eighth of Iceland is glacier hidden, and there are ice clad mountain domes, of which the highest is Oraetajökull, 6,424 feet.

There are not many settlements in Iceland. The capital is Reykjavik, with a population of 11,000, and after that the two chief towns are Akureyl, 2,089, and Isafjord, 1,859 inhabitants. The people of Iceland are described as unusually intelligent, and one authority states that "perhaps in no other country of Europe are so many books in proportion to the population printed and sold as in Iceland."

Myth of the Doones.

How largely Mr. Blackmore drew upon his imagination for the story of "Lorna Doone" is made clear by F.
W. Hackwood in his book, "The Good Old Times." There were, in fact, no Doones. The word was simply a local bogey, a modified form of "Dane," a memory of the faroff times when the vikings invaders harried the land. "The only vestige of actuality discoverable is a faint tradition that a fugitive from the battle of Sedgemoor, to escape the hangings of Judge Jeffreys, appropriated the ruins of some wretched huts in recesses of the Badgworthy glen, now
'the Doon valley,' finding there a safe retreat in which he reared a considerable family, which managed to eke out a living by committing petty depredations in the district. The 'last of the Doones,' an old man and his granddaughter, are said to have perished in the snow during the winter of 1800."

Cunning Scheme.

This from a conductor on a Northwestern street car: "A north side resident has been riding on this car for a number of years twice a day, and I often noted that he never bought tickets, but paid his fare in cash. One day I asked him why he did not buy tickets and save 25 cents on the dollar.
'Well, you see, it's like this,' the patron replied. 'Very often I meet an acquaintance on the car, and when the conductor comes for the fares I offer the money, while the acquaintance generally has tickets and immediately offers to pay the two fares with his tickets and in this accommodating manner permits me to save my money. I find the money saved by this scheme exceeds the amount saved by the purchase of tickets.'"

Not Guilty.

Mr. Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge leaned languidly over the top rail of his fence and gazed pensively at a hog lying in the road. A motorcar came skallyhooting down the hill and ran over the recumbent porker. Something went wrong with the mechanism. The car swerved from the highway, plunged down into a considerable hollow and landed wrong side up with the occupants unconscious beneath it.
Mr. Johnson presently strolled over and looked calmly down into the pit.
"Say," he finally called, "you folks don't have to hide under there. That hog was dead when you hit it. The last automobile along killed it, and the feller paid for it."—Exchange.

Holy Friendships Consoled Pious People in the Middle Ages.

The trustful and childlike piety of the middle ages believed that the citizens of heaven were interested in every phase of men's lives, and there was not a single trade, profession or occupation that did not boast a special patron, while certain diseases were thought to be cured and certain visitations warded off through the intercession and agency of particular saints.

Thus St. Andrew was the patron of fishermen, St. Isidore of husbandmen, St. Christopher of porters, St. Mark of lawyers, St. Cosmas and Damian of doctors, St. Joseph of carpenters, St.
Crispin of shoemakers, St. Vitus of actors, St. Gregory of singers, St. Dismas (supposed name of the good thief) of criminals condemned to death, St. Apollonia was believed to cure toothache, St. Blaise sore throat, St. Clare and Lucy sore eyes, while St. Benedict preserved his clients from poison and St.
Hubert from the bite of mad dogs.

"Men," says Montalembert, "lived in a tender and intimate familiarity with those forefathers whom God had evidently called to himself and whose sanctity the church has proclaimed.
From the king and the pontiff to the poorest workman—each had a special protector in heaven, and in the battles, dangers and sorrows of life these holy friendships exercised a most consoling and strengthening influence."—Irish

That Old, Old Table.

It is impossible to know who was the author of the multiplication table, but it is known to have been in existence in the days of the builders of the ruined cities of Mesopotamia, whose records are now being patiently deciphered by archaeologists. Tablets are found which tell us of their system of education, banking, accounting, business correspondence, etc., and among others are multiplication tables. So the multiplication table is probably not less than 6,000 years old.—Christian Herald.

The Tenrec.

One of the strangest animals known to zoologists is the tenrec, an insect eating animal found only in the island of Madagascar. It is supposed to represent a very ancient type of animal which is now almost extinct. Madagascar, once a part of the mainland of the African continent, was separated therefrom at a very remote period in the past. As a result a fauna peculiar to the island has been developed.

The Fearsome Triceratops.

A terrible looking beast, but interesting, as it was the last of the great land reptiles, is the triceratops. It had a head like a rhinoceros; but, unlike the rhinoceros of today, it carried three formidable horns upon its face and a collar of spikes or spines around its neck. Skulls of this creature which have been unearthed measure seven feet and more in length. The animal had a total length of some twenty-five feet. It is the opinion of a great authority on prehistoric beasts that we have here a dinosaur trying to become a mammal. It is the opinion of this expert, too, that the creature got too "specialized" and therefore died out—the usual end of a too great ambition!—London Mail.

SACRED TOOTH OF BUDDHA.

The Palace in Ceylon in Which This Relic is Preserved.

At all times of the year in Kandy, Ceylon, may be seen followers of Buddha making their way to the great Mahigawa temple, the "Palace of the Sacred Tooth," in order to lay offerings and flowers at the shrine of the founder of their religion.

Entering the temple, they pass into a small room, some twelve feet square, in which is kept the famous tooth of Buddha. The chamber is lighted by two lamps which have not been allowed to go out for years. The walls are splendidly decorated, and the vessel—called the Karundua—containing the tooth stands on a massive silver table amidst a gorgeous array of jewels and other valuable gifts.

The Karundua is draped with muslin, beneath which is a silver dome studded with gems, and under this is a dome of gold, beautifully carved and literally incrustured with precious stones. Two similar coverings lie below them, and beneath these is a small case of gold, in which on leaves of a gold lotus reposes the tooth itself. This relic, carefully guarded, is seldom seen by others than priests.

So much in reverence is the tooth held that to lay an offering to Buddha on the table bearing it is an ambition which every Buddhist would not fail to gratify if circumstances permitted.—Pearson's Weekly.

Interpreting a Problem.

Apropos of the problem of the greatest number that can be expressed by three figures, L. Capitaine writes that the figures 99 may be interpreted in two different ways. They may mean the ninth power of the ninth power of 9, or they may mean 9 raised to the ninth power of 9.

The ninth power of 9 is 387,420,489. This number raised to the ninth power is nothing so tremendous; any one could do the necessary calculation with a little time, as the result has only about seventy-five figures. But if we accept the second interpretation—9 raised to the ninth power of 9—it means that we shall have to multiply 9 by itself 387,420,489 times, which is a very different thing.

If All the World Were Perfect.

If all the world were perfect an intolerable sameness would be stamped upon humanity from one end of the earth to the other. "For the love of heaven," some one has exclaimed, "let me retain my defects. That is the only thing I really have." Moreover, there are some really quite captivating human defects. But it is important to control them so that they may never become obnoxious.—Anatole Le Braz in Outlook.

THE WORD "LOVE."

In the Orient It Means to Like or Is Used to Express Good Will.

The word "love" has been more highly specialized in the west than in the east. In its proper English use it means only that ardent, amorous feeling which cannot be created by will and design. In the west the word "love" has been relieved of the function of expressing the less ardent desires, such as the terms "to like," "to have good will toward" and "to be well disposed toward" simply.

Not so in the east. The word "like," meaning "to be favorably inclined toward," is not found either in the Bible or in the Arabic tongue. In the English version of the Bible it is used in two places, but the translation is incorrect. In the twenty-fifth chapter of Deuteronomy and the seventh verse,
"If the man like not to take his brother's wife," should be rendered "If the man 'consent' not," and in the fourth chapter of Amos, the fifth verse, "For this liketh you, O ye children of Israel," is in the original, "For this ye 'loved,' O ye children of Israel." In any standard concordance of the Bible the Hebrew verb ahab—to love—precedes these quotations.

So to us orientals the only word which can express any cordial inclination of approval is "love." One loves his wife and children and loves grapes and figs and meat, if he likes these things. An employer says to an employee, "If you 'love' to work for me according to this agreement you can."

It is nothing uncommon for one to say to a casual acquaintance whom he likes, "I must say, sahib (friend), that I love you!" I know of no equivalent in the Arabic for the phrase, "I am interested in you." "Love" and "hate" are the usual terms by which to express approval and disapproval, as well as real love and hatred.

From all this it may be seen that when the Great Oriental Teacher said to his countrymen, who considered all other clans than their own as their enemies, "Love your enemies," he did not mean that they should be enamored of them, but that they should have good will toward them. We cannot love by will and design, but we certainly can will to be well disposed even toward those who, we believe, have ill will toward us.—Abraham Mit-tle Ribbony in Atlantic Monthly.

SPIDERS AS FACTORY HANDS.

Spinning the Delicate Threads For Use In Telescopes.

Spiders are probably the most indispensable workmen in one of the largest English surveying instrument factories. It is their duty to spin the delicate thread which is used for the cross hairs to mark the exact center of the object lens in the surveyor's telescope.

Spider web is the only suitable material yet discovered for the cross hairs of surveying instruments. Almost invisible as this fiber is to the naked eye, it is brought up in the powerful lenses of the telescope to the size of a man's thumb, so that all defects, if there happened to be any, would be magnified to such a degree that the web would be useless.

being attached to a metal wire frame whirled in the hands of a girl. The girl first places the spider on her hand until the protruding end of the thread has become attached. When the spider attempts to leap to the ground this end is quickly attached to the center of the whirling frame, and as the spider pays out thread this line is wrapped around the frame. Several hundred feet of thread can be removed from a spider at one time.

The spiders are kept in a large room under the supervision of three girls and a forewoman. When not spinning the little workmen are placed in a large wooden cage. Flies are the chief article of diet.

During the winter months the spider colony usually dies, so that an entirely new corps of workmen must be recruited. Not every spider will do—only large, fat fellows that spin a tough round thread are suitable.

Singularly enough, the girls who have charge of the spiders in this English factory are not in the least afraid of them or their bites. On the contrary, they regard them as pets, are able to tell them apart and to call them by nicknames which humorously describe their appearance or their peculiar habits of work.

Former Peace and War Cycles.

Isalah had an inspired vision of a time when swords should be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks. By the Amphictyonic council the Greeks sought to mitigate wars between the Greek states, though their efforts did not reach as far as the barbarians, as they called the rest of the world. In the eleventh century A. D. a peace movement called the truce of God spread over western Europe. A peace palace was erected and conferences were held at Liege, and Christendom dreamed the same dream of peace that it afterward dreamed in the first decade of the twentieth century—a dream from which it was rudely awakened by the Crusades.—Christian Herald.

Flowers and Scents.

Some flowers appear to change their scents at different times. The common

The Oasis of Jupiter.

The oasis of Siva is better known as the oasis of Jupiter Ammon, one of the most famous oracles of antiquity.
The visit of Alexander the Great to this temple was among the most romantic incidents of his career. He came to ask whether he was only the son of the mortal Philip or the son of the great god himself. Apparently Alexander received full assurance from the oracle of his divine origin, with the promise of unbroken victory until he should be taken away to join the gods.
And many signs showed his superhuman status. Rain fell in the desert just when his soldiers' thirst required it, and when his guides lost their way two speaking serpents or ravens appeared to direct them.—London Chronicle.

Took It as a Joke.

There is a story of Mr. Disraeli at the time of his extremely bumptious youth when he had just returned from his travels in the east. As a young man, much under thirty, he met Lord Melbourne, who was then prime minister, at dinner. Lord Melbourne proceeded to discourse on the eastern question, but instead of listening to the prime minister with the respect which he ought young Disraeli said, "It seems to me that your lordship has taken your knowledge of the east from 'The Arabian Nights.'"

Some prime ministers would have snubbed the young man severely. Lord Melbourne was not of that kind. He rubbed his hands with great cheerfulness and said to the young man, "And a devilish good place to take it from!"

A TALE of RED ROSES

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER

CHAPTER VIII.

The Stockholders Wield Their Mighty Ballots.

IF a slight feeling of panic threatened Sledge when he stepped into the stockholders' meeting of the reorganized street railway company nobody knew it, for he sat off to one side of the president's table, facing the gathering, as heavily indifferent as ever, his big face expressionless and his small gray eyes gazing steadily straight ahead at nothing.

Marley was far more nervous than he, waiting impatiently, gavel in hand, for Acting Secretary Hunt to finish his tedious job of clerical work. Considerable stock had been brought in to be entered on the books, and, as the certificates were displayed to him, Hunt, with a lavender silk handkerchief tucked in his cuff, looked occasionally across at Sledge, evidently worried that he could not catch the eye of the big chief.

Bert Glider was the last man in line at Hunt's desk, and as he handed over a large bundle of certificates Hunt glanced at the name on the back of the top one and coughed loudly. He scraped his chair. He dropped his corporate seal on the floor with a loud clatter, but Sledge looked straight ahead. Whatever had happened to him he would know in good time, but in the meantime he was going to rest mind and body and nerves, and, if the big boss had one faculty which more than another had helped him to success, this was it—his putty-like inertia.

Marley, waiting, gavel in hand and pulling with rapid strokes at his goatee, watched this little tableau until, with another perspiring glance at Sledge, Hunt handed back the bunch of certificates to Glider and closed his books. Then, at last, the president's gavel fell, and he announced the special stockholders' meeting of the Ring City Street Railway company open for business.

Immediately he made a neat little speech to his faithful friends, the stanch investors, who had believed in the future of their heretofore prosperous organization well enough to hold to their stock or to purchase more in the face of apparent adversity. It was true that certain purely manipulative transactions had seemed to militate against the company and had temporarily depressed the market value of line the new one would have one on an adjoining street, with newer and better and swifter cars, and a closer schedule, and unless something radical were done he would not give a continental cuss per bale for the stock of the now rapidly dying Ring City Street Railway company.

A long low sigh, like the midnight sighing in a churchyard, arose from that meeting, as Attorney Tucker sat down. Little Henry Peters, with a livid face, clutched the arm of his wattle necked neighbor.

"If that man had only come back I could have got thirty-five for my stock!" he wailed. "I'm ruined. I shall lose my home! Frank Marley is a rotten business man!"

"Yeh!" intoned the crooked nosed one. "They're all thieves."

Jim Delancy, who, with a clear eye and a straight countenance, could make louder speeches than any man in the Eighth ward, painted even a blacker picture than Attorney Tucker, and when he sat down he had bankrupted every stockholder within the sound of his voice. It even seemed incredible that a street car should still be whizzing outside. Little Henry Peters sat numbly, with his hair clutched in his hands. If he could have swapped his $9,000 worth of street railway stock for a jackknife with two broken blades his conscience would have hurt him, and every stockholder was in his class. Misery sat enthroned on every countenance.

Daniel B. Atkins, a rising young lawyer, with no capital but an empty conscience and a silver tongue, was the first individual since Marley to offer a gleam of hope.

He admitted all that the preceding gentlemen had said and believed, himself, that the company was reduced to pauperism unless something radical could be done. He had believed this so thoroughly that he had lain awake nights trying to evolve a plan for their salvation.

He had evolved it—a scheme whereby the company could not only raise its stock to par, but place it at a premium; whereby the company could become a monopoly and extend its business to meet the growing demands of the city and become again a 7 per cent dividend concern, capable of piling up again a tremendous construction surplus. On his own responsibility he had gone to the organizer of the rival new

"No!" hotly yelled Bert Glider.

"I second the motion," announced Attorney Tucker.

"It has been moved and seconded that we purchase the franchises and good will of the street car company represented by Mr. Bozzam for the sum of $250,000 cash," stated President Marley, looking about him with cool aloofness. "Are there any remarks?"

There were—a perfect pandemonium of them—and out of the battle President Marley recognized Attorney Tucker.

Attorney Tucker begged leave of the chair to ask Mr. Bozzam just one question and received it.

"Positively!" declared Mr. Bozzam, with vast firmness.

"One more question. Are you empowered to close this deal?"

"I am," replied Mr. Bozzam. "I have a free hand."

Sledge almost looked at the genial promoter.

"Then we must pay the price," fervently asserted Attorney Tucker. "This is a gleam of hope in the darkness, a way out of our difficulties, a solution to our troubles. We have the cash to purchase these franchises, which will give us a practical monopoly of the city's street car business. We can either increase our capitalization or issue bonds to pay for our extensions, and, in the meantime, the moment we conclude this deal our stock jumps back to par."

Loud cries of "Question!" came from all over the hall, and Little Henry Peters, after the demand had started, shouted louder than anybody.

Young Daniel B. Atkins wanted to make a speech and was granted that privilege.

He was more enthusiastic about paying out that $250,000 than anybody, and, being a professional whooper-up, he used his clarion voice and silver tongue to such good advantage that the throng was with difficulty restrained from rushing up to Bozzam and paying him the money on the spot.

In defiance of the madly expressed wishes of the multitude, however, President Marley recognized Bert Glider.

"Move to amend the resolution to read fifty thousand in place of two hundred and fifty!" he shouted.

"Second the motion!" yelled a big mouthed young man sitting next to him.

"Mr. President," exclaimed Mr. Bozzam, rising to his feet, "that amendment is positively useless."

A frantic hubbub arose. The hall was a sea of open mouths. Little Henry Peters held his mouth open wider than any stockholder present. One could see his tonsils perfectly. He was helping to bowl down Bert Glider's absurd amendment.

President Marley tapped his gavel energetically.

"I perceive that it is useless to waste time on speeches against this amendment," he announced. "Are there any remarks to be made in favor of it? The chair will permit five minutes for such argument." He waited a moment. No one arose. Attorney Tucker stood up.

"If the chair please"—he began.

"Are you about to speak in favor of this amendment?" interrupted the

"The motion carries!" Mr. Bozzam stated to state, after the stockholders had shouted "No!" names. "Gentlemen, it is useful to waste time except for the formal record over such matters. Heretofore I have been but today, for the first time in the history of this company, I contrarily of the stock, and my sufficient to carry or defeat any. To begin with, I refuse to be I am willing to pay $50,000 franchises are worth $50,000. I won't pay a cent more. The Bozzam took the chair next. "It looks like we're up again!" stated. "Hunh!" grunted Sledge.

actions had seemed to militate against the company and had temporarily depressed the market value of its stock.

However, the president went on, the intrinsic value of the stock was still there, and, with that thought constantly in mind, there was no need for a panic. The stock was worth and should command par. The improvements, for which the reorganization had been made, were to be carried out, and others vastly greater were in immediate contemplation.

It was a hopeful speech, a rousing speech, a reassuring speech, and President Marley felt when he sat down, bathed in self approbation and perspiration, that, there being six reporters present by special invitation, he had raised the market value of his stock from ten to fifteen points.

So impressive was his speech that little Henry Peters, whose cheeks were shrunk and pale and whose wrinkle framed eyes were bleared from the loss of sleep, turned to his nearest neighbor and said, with a sigh of relief:

"I'm glad I didn't sell my stock day before yesterday. I almost took thirty-five for it, but the man didn't come back."

His neighbor, a wattle necked man with a crooked nose and towlike hair which swept down his forehead and curled up over his eyebrows, said through his nose, like the wheeze of a penny whistle:

"Nyah; everything's all talk."

Let his fellow stockholders beware of too much optimism. He himself had been, next to President Marley, the largest individual holder of stock in the company. He had sold all but an extremely small portion before the panic and wished that he had sold the balance, for the outlook was very gloomy. He did not wish to make his remarks in the form of a personal tirade, but he did feel it necessary to point out that the downfall and ultimate ruin of their company was due, not to mismanagement, but to political manipulation.

"Let me tell you the truth," he shouted. "We have with us today, at this very meeting, a man of tremendous power and influence; a politician of national renown: one who is at this moment under the searching eye of the law; an omnipotent friend and a relentless foe, and this man has chosen, for reasons of his own, to wreck, and devastate and turn to useless rust the Ring City Street railway company."

Every eye was turned to Sledge, but that omnipotent friend and relentless foe, without moving a corpusele, gazed straight ahead at nothing.

As if infuriated by his impassiveness, Attorney Tucker, who was paid by Sledge for the purpose, figuratively ripped the big boss up the back, skinned him alive, hung up his hide to dry, and scattered his ashes to the winds, painting him as an insatiable monster, and chiefly calling attention to his habits of ruthless devastation. Wherever the present street car company had a again a tremendous construction surplus. On his own responsibility he had gone to the organizer of the rival new company and had labored with him for hours to persuade him to come to this meeting and lay before it a rather novel but life saving proposition. Would the stockholders permit him to introduce the eminent promoter and organizer, Mr. Bozzam, who would present his proposition in person?

The stockholders would. They said so, with so vociferous and almost fearful a clamor that President Marley could scarcely make himself heard to obtain a formal vote on the proposition.

Mr. Bozzam entered, with his hair not too smoothly brushed nor his clothes not so immaculate, but he looked businesslike and sat down quietly in the seat courteously offered him by President Marley. He was a wide shouldered man, with a pleasant countenance and a good forehead, who looked as if he had muscles under his coat, and he was well liked by the concourse. Little Henry Peters judged that he was a keen business man, but square and said so.

"Wagh!" nasaled the tow haired neighbor. "I wouldn't trust anybody."

"How many shares of stock have you got?" asked little Henry.

"Three," boasted the wattle necked one. "My brother-in-law give 'em to me."

Mr. Marley introduced the caller in a few, neat, aseptic words. He had met Mr. Bozzam socially and only hoped that he would prove as pleasant commercially.

Laughing gracefully at this clever turn of speech, Mr. Bozzam continued the introduction himself, stating exactly who and what he was—an organizer, representing a group of eastern capitalists devoted to the promotion and extension of the street railway industries. Back of his backers were certain huge electrical, steel and car building industries. It had been his pleasure to organize and to put in shape for immediate construction operations a new company in their own thriving city. They were ready to begin laying rails at once, but it had been earnestly represented to him that the manufacturing interests of his group of capitalists would be just as well served by permitting the new lines to be erected by the old company, and after a conference with his principals it had been decided that if the Ring City Street Railway company wished to monopolize their legitimately anticipated profits this could be done by the purchase of their franchises and good will at a purely nominal figure.

A buzz of satisfaction followed this magnanimous offer, and little Henry Peters was for purchasing the franchises immediately.

"I'd have lost all my years of saving if I'd sold my stock at thirty-five," he told his neighbor.

"I don't understand it, but it's a skin game," announced the crooked nose man. "Who is this fellow, anyhow?"

Mr. Marley turned to Mr. Bozzam with the frank smile of a gentleman.

"And how much would your company consider a merely nominal figure?" he inquired, with smoothness.

Young Daniel B. Atkins immediately moved to accept that price.

Tucker stood up.

"If the chair please"—he began.

"Are you about to speak in favor of this amendment?" interrupted the chair.

"No," replied Attorney Tucker.

"The chair refuses to recognize the gentleman," announced the president. "The secretary will take a roll call vote on the amendment."

They endured that as men do, only venting their emotions by the vehemence of their "No!" on the roll call vote. A scant few had the temerity to vote "Yes" and were nearly mobbed for their daring. The most of them kept their eyes on Bozzam in fearful anxiety lest, offended by this proceeding, he might withdraw his generous offer and walk out, leaving them doomed to extinction by his mighty rivalry.

"Albert T. Glider," called the secretary, "a thousand shares."

"Yes," voted Bert and curled both sides of his mustache, looking across at Sledge and grinning. He had the intense satisfaction of seeing Sledge turn, but was disappointed after all Sledge did not look at him, but at Hunt.

There followed another wilderness of "No's!" voted by holders of from five to a hundred shares each.

"B. Franklin Marley," called Hunt, and this time he caught Sledge's eye. "4,020 shares."

"Yes!" voted Marley, with a snarlingly triumphant laugh at Sledge, a laugh which showed his teeth and made his nose an acute triangle down over them, like the point of a pen.

CHAPTER IX.

Sledge Rises to Emergency.

SLEDGE walked across to the secretary's desk while the balance of the rabble were shouting "No!" and conferred with Hunt a moment; then he went back to his chair and gazed steadily straight ahead at nothing. His small gray eyes had no more gleam in them than a dusty marble.

Hunt announced the net result of the vote, but Sledge paid no attention to stated. "I guess fifty thousand best we can do."

"Hunh!" grunted Sledge.

"Mr. President," said Bozz to his feet, "since the matter be entirely in your hands, ask if that is your ultimatum." "It is," announced Marley at him with only the faintest of a twinkle in his eye.

"Then I must beg time again with my principals." Again the trace of a twink Marley's eyes.

"There is a time limit on it," he returned. "You say you were empowered to act you five minutes to make up your mind. After that my offer is withdrawn."

Mr. Bozzam quite obviously gazed with his pride.

"I accept," said he, turning palms upward.

A cheer, loud and prolonged that humiliating capitulation midst of it the huge Sledge mere bulk a symbol of disaster. "Nix!" he thundered, and Both Phil and Blondy wore mournful faces when Sledge through to the back room. "He's game, all right," said Phil.

"By the way," Phil informed him,

"Gee, the boss is cut up about Bob!" Phil reported to Blondy. "I told him about Sunny Jim, and he never even ward's gone."

Sledge was not so unimpressed as he seemed to be, however, for presently he sent for Phil and instructed that a big floral piece be sent and that the widow's affairs be looked into.

Bendix came in by and by, looking very much worried, and sat down heavily.

"How's Bob?" he asked.
"He's all right," declared Sledge.
"Not a whimper out of him."
Bendix hesitated a moment.

"Did you hear that Sunny Jim Keeler is dead?" he inquired.
Sledge nodded.

"There ain't a man up there could take the leadership of that ward," went on Bendix, much discouraged. "It's the Third that has always saved us."

Sledge, sitting heavily, did not answer. He seemed to have collapsed like a huge figure of dough settling into a pan.

"That means we lose the Third ward," Bendix spiritlessly pursued, "so we're in bad, politically."

Sledge was still motionless.

"I looked up Marley's Ridgewood avenue franchise," resumed Bendix.
"It's good, all right. Yesterday's meeting was a bright one for him. A few shares of traction stock traded hands on the board today. The last lot brought fifty-one. Bert Glider is floating his amusement park. He's made a dicker with the company already formed to abandon the Lincoln Road park, and they're to take over the Porson tract. The Lincoln road property is to be used for car barns, according to the latest dope from Marley, and Glider gets $50,000 in stock and management of the park. It looks like a cinch for pretty Bert."

Sledge raised his chin a half inch and dropped it again.

"I saw Bozzam," Bendix went on with his report. "He claims that, while you own 75 per cent of the stock of the new traction company and could swing everything in a vote, he is the duly authorized agent of the company and has the right to sell its franchises at the best price he can get, so he's going to close with Marley."

"Hunh!" grunted Sledge.

"So we lose there," relentlessly pursued Bendix. "At this stage of the game you had expected to have Marley entirely frozen out and to own the majority of stock yourself, announce the purchase of the franchises and raise the stock to par. Now the stock's going up, and most of it has been grabbed by Marley. I figure he'll clean up about $100,000 on this deal."

Sledge favored him with the beginning of a chuckle at himself, but that was all.

Sledge smiled. It was like the grimace of a man in the electric chair.

"But the worst is yet to come," persisted Bendix, beginning to have a certain lugubrious enjoyment in the interminable list of disasters. "Schwarzman tells me that Judge Lansdale positively refuses that appointment as attorney for the anti-dry movement. If he stays on the bench, Sledge, nothing on earth will make you right. With all your power, and all your influence, and all your money, and all your friends, you can't get away from that trial; and if you ever come to a showdown they'll get you. The best you can do will be two years away from the sunshine. When you go out for a walk you'll have your hand on the shoulder of the man in front of you, and when you get back into the Occident you won't have enough of the organization left to act as pallbearers."

Sledge's chin sank a little lower on his collar. He had never permitted the shadow of defeat to touch even the hem of his coat, but now its dimness seemed very close to him, and in that shade there was a chill. Adolph brought in a letter, a square white envelope which looked strangely out of place on the edge of a beer tray.

Bendix took it, sent Adolph out with a jerk of his thumb and started to open it, but the flap was sealed with a fancifully wrought monogram stamped in gold sealing wax, and after a moment of reflection he passed it silently over to his chief.

Sledge opened it mechanically and drew out a neatly engraved card, which read as follows:

Mr. B. Franklin Marley begs to announce the engagement
of his daughter,
To Mr. Albert T. Gilder.

Sledge slipped that announcement calmly in his pocket and turned slowly to his pitcher on the table. Whatever his idea concerning that may have been he changed it, for, his eyes slowly distending, he reached out and grabbed the pitcher, and suddenly there was a splintering crash. He had thrown the pitcher with its contents straight through the window, glass and all!

"All off with the roses, eh?" surmised Bendix, considerably concealing his sympathetic knowledge of the hurt which had been inflicted.

"Naw!" roared Sledge. "They sent me some blanked pink ones!"

CHAPTER X. The Quarrel.

SLEDGE'S first step toward "picking up the beans" was to send Bendix down to round up the Third ward and then to lock himself in the president's room of the First National for an hour, at the end of which time he sent for Davis.

"I want $750,000," he directed.

"Aw, hang up!" rasped Sledge. "You told Bendix you had a right to sell it and was going to. Why didn't you?"

"I've been waiting because I wanted to act with your consent."

Sledge chuckled.

"You mean Marley was afraid to buy until I agreed."

INFLATION AS A DEFENSE.

Easy For the Puffer Fish to Balk Its Natural Enemies.

The puffer fish affords a novel example of the way nature sometimes works to protect her creatures. The many different species inhabit all tropical and other warm seas and certain large rivers. Few of them reach a length of more than two feet.

The peculiar characteristic common to all of them is their ability to inflate themselves with air or water until they become almost spherical in shape. The air or water that fills the abdomen or the esophageal sac is retained by a valve in the throat and can be discharged almost instantly.

A few good sized scup were placed in one of the exhibition tanks of the New York Zoological society with a dozen puffers about two inches long. The hungry scup at once attacked the puffers, but in an instant every puffer inflated itself so completely with water that it became almost globular. All the scup could do was to knock them about like toy balloons, too big to be swallowed, too smooth to afford any hold to the jaws.

Puffers that become frightened near the surface of the sea and are inflated with air sometimes drift ashore, where they roll along the sands until they die and are dried by the sun and wind. The Japanese make lanterns of their dried inflated bodies, for the stretched skin is as transparent as oiled paper.—Youth's Companion.

DEWBERRY PLANTATIONS.

The Berry Has Proved Profitable In Many Sections.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

The dewberry has proved profitable in many sections because it ripens somewhat earlier than the true blackberry, which it resembles greatly in other respects. Sometimes indeed the dewberry is called the trailing blackberry from the fact that its canes trail on the ground while those of the blackberry are upright. The clusters of the dewberry also are small and open in comparison with those of the blackberry.

At the present time the dewberry is grown most extensively in North Carolina and New Jersey, but there are also plantations in Maryland, Texas, Missouri, Michigan, Colorado and most of the other states. The Lucretia, the most popular variety, is not very hardy, and hitherto its culture has been confined to rather mild climates. Any fertile soil provided with good drainage and with a good supply of humus to retain moisture is suitable for growing dewberries. Many of the large fields in North Carolina are on coarse sand, and in other sections clay loams are used for this purpose. The plants, however, should not be set on wet soil. Under such conditions root rot has been found to kill the plants. On the other hand, a sufficient supply of moisture is essential for the development and ripening of the berries.

Dewberry plants are usually set during the winter and early spring in the

A complete farm should have a few stands of bees. They can supply the family with honey, and the surplus will return good profit. Soy Beans For Fodder.

The experiment station of Connecticut urges farmers in that state and throughout New England to grow soy beans as a fodder crop. They have demonstrated the value of this plant, especially when mixed with corn in the silo. They advise the following varieties: Hollybrook, Medium Green and Ito San. These yield well, the seed is not expensive, and they are well suited to the climate. The soy beans may be grown separately and mixed with the corn at the cutter, or the two seeds may be grown together. In the latter case one part of soy beans by measure will be mixed with three parts

THE CULTIVATED ORCHARD.

Intercropping May Be Practiced With Young Trees.

The cultivated orchard is more productive and consequently more profitable than the average orchard which is neglected or in which grass or hay is grown, asserts F. S. Merrill, assistant in horticulture, Kansas State Agricultural college.

"In the young orchard, however, a judicious system of intercropping may be practiced without causing injury to the trees, and at the same time profitable crops will be produced in the waste space between the rows," says Mr. Merrill. "Sufficient space should be left on each side of the tree to permit thorough cultivation of the tree rows. As a general rule, the roots of the tree extend beyond the outer ends of the limbs. A strip may be left proportionate in width to the spread of the branches.

"One of the most familiar types of intercropping can be found in planting fillers between the permanent trees and often between the rows. The peach or some type of early maturing apple can be used for this purpose, but in most cases the grower will not re-

"ANURIC!" THE NEWEST DISCOVERY IN CHEMISTRY

This is a recent discovery of Doctor Pierce, who is head of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y. Experiments at Doctor Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid that can be compared to it. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

Go to your nearest drug store and simply ask for a 50-cent package of "Anuric," manufactured by Dr. Pierce, or send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for a large trial package. If you suspect kidney or bladder trouble, send him a sample of your water and describe symptoms. Doctor Pierce's chemist will examine it, then Dr. Pierce will report to you, without fee or charge.

NOTE:—French scientists affirm that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid, and is a harmless but reliable chemical compound that may be safely given to children, but should be used only by grown-ups who actually wish to restore their kidneys to perfect health, by conscientiously using one box—or more in extreme cases—as "Anuric" (thanks to Doctor Pierce's achievement) is by far the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector obtainable.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the original little Liver Pills. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.

seeds may be grown together. In the latter case one part of soy beans by measure will be mixed with three parts of corn and dropped out of the planter in this proportion. It is better to sow the two seeds together rather than to wait until the corn is up and then drop the soy beans. It is better to use lime with them, although they will grow fairly well without it. Inoculation is needed when the soy beans are grown for the first time, but after the crop is grown two years in succession no further inoculation will be needed.

A Cooker For Canning.

An ordinary clothes boiler in which a false bottom has been fitted may be used as a cooker in canning fruit and vegetables. However, the canning outfit now on the market will be more satisfactory. The false bottom used in the makeshift cooker may be placed on a couple of pieces of hard wood thick enough to hold the false bottom away from the cooker bottom. The false bottom is made of a strong piece of steel netting. The cooker must have a tight fitting lid.

Cauliflower Soil.

If cauliflower is to thrive it must be planted on moist, well drained, fertile soil.

BUYING A FARM.

When buying a farm remember that farming is as much of a business as making bricks is, and investigate as closely as if you were about to buy a business. If you satisfy the following six essential rules you cannot go far wrong:

First.—Be perfectly certain that your neighbors are congenial, for farming in an uncongenial neighborhood is impossible.

Second.—Locate near a school and a church. You can get labor easier even if you do not use them yourself.

Third.—Be sure the country is healthy and the water pure.

Fourth.—Look well into the transportation facilities—roads, railroads and rates.

Fifth.—Find out where the markets are.

Sixth.—Then buy a good piece of farm land.

If you fulfill these six conditions—and there are plenty of such places in the United States—and you are willing to work, really work, you will find health and prosperity and abounding happiness on a farm.—World's Work.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

and ripening of the berries.

Dewberry plants are usually set during the winter and early spring in the south and in early spring in the north. As they occupy the soil for several years, the land should be well prepared beforehand. The use of cover crops to add humus to the soil is frequently a desirable preliminary, and much better results are usually secured if the land is planted to cultivated crops for two years before setting out the plantation. This will result in a better growth of the plants the first year, and the plantation will yield a crop much sooner than if no such preparation is made.

Two systems of planting are followed—the hill system and the solid row system. With the former the plants are set five feet distant each way, with the latter three feet apart in rows which are four to six feet apart. Cultivation is begun as soon as the plants are in the ground and continued until the growth of the canes trailing along the ground interferes with the work. The following spring, just before the buds start, the canes should be trained. There are a number of different ways of doing this, details of which are discussed in farmer's bulletin 728, a new publication of the United States department of agriculture on this subject. In some cases where the hill system is used stakes are set by each plant and the canes wound in the spiral around them. With the solid row system of culture posts are sometimes set between every two plants, and in other places a wire trellis is used.

In the south, where the growing season is long, all the canes both old and new are usually cut off after the fruit has been picked. In northern regions the season is too short to secure a new growth, and in consequence the old canes only are removed. The former method has the advantage of minimizing danger from the diseases which affect the dewberry. Of these the two most serious are anthracnose and double blossom. In states where it is not possible to remove the canes after harvesting the crop the blossom disease is controlled by removing in the spring all buds which show infection.

Prospective dewberry raisers usually obtain their plants from nurseries. Those, however, who already have a plantation can raise their own plants by covering the tips of the young canes with a few inches of soil late in the summer or early in the autumn. These tips will root freely, and the new plants will be ready to dig late that fall or early the next spring. The duration of a plantation will depend largely upon the attention it receives and the system of pruning adopted. In North Carolina plantations fifteen years old are still productive.

ANTIDOTES FOR POISONS.

Practical Hints About Avoiding Death Dealing Drugs.

Poison looks innocent. That is why so many people are poisoned accidentally. Some poisons are sweet to the taste. That is why children may easily mistake them for sugar and water.

When you buy a poison ask for a distinctive label and have it state the proper antidote. Be particular to keep your poison in its distinctive package.
Never tolerate its careless exposure.

In case of poisoning by any of the poisons most commonly taken by accident follow these rules:

Always remember that the first thing in all cases is to empty the stomach.

Poisoning by mineral acids may be neutralized by chalk, magnesia, even

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

CONSUMPTION.

THIS IS A DISEASE of the lungs caused by a germ known as the bacillus tuberculosis. This germ causes, in addition to tuberculosis of the lungs or consumption, many forms of tuberculous disease, such as tuberculous meningitis, hip-joint disease, white swelling of the knee, tuberculous peritonitis, etc. In fact there is no part of the body which may not become subject to this affection. The disease is contracted by inhaling the droplets of infection coughed out by the person ill of tuberculosis of the lungs or from the inhalation of dried sputum, and generally from close contact with careless victims of the disease who spit about any place. Children frequently contract the disease by drinking milk from tuberculous cows, and in children the disease so acquired may not show active symptoms till between 12 and 20 years of age. One of the earliest and most constant symptoms of Consumption is cough. In the growth of tuberculosis of the lungs, as well as elsewhere, little nodules or tubercles are formed. The pressure of these and the irritation caused by the secretion from the bacilli of tuberculosis upon the nerves of the lung is the reason of the cough. One coughs to try and get rid of some irritating particle. At first the cough is dry and hacking without any sputum because at first there is none to bring up. So don't make the mistake of disregarding a cough of this kind because no matter is coughed up.

After a while when the tubercles have caused a little bronchitis a small amount of mucus will be coughed up. At this time a microscopical examination of this may or may not show the bacilli causing the disease.
Under the microscope these look like tiny little rods. Later there is a free secretion and the cough seems less annoying because a mouthful of secretion is brought up each time.

As the sputum increases in quantity it is at first white, then yellow, then grayish or greenish in color. As the disease progresses and cavities are formed the amount coughed up in a day may exceed one pint. Generally the patient coughs more when he gets up in the morning, and continues coughing till the lungs are cleared out. Others cough more when they lie down. All consumptive patients, unless they have learned better, cough too much. If one visits the sanatoria at Gravenhurst, London, Ottawa, or elsewhere one hears very little coughing. There are two reasons for this. One is that the patients live in the open air and the other is that they are taught to avoid coughing. The dry, hacking cough does harm to the sick lung, tires the muscles, and uses up the patient's vitality without doing any good. Where there is free secretion it is useful to cough it out, but this is easily accomplished.

Medical Officer of Health. A.C.C., Orillia.

Q.—Why cannot a municipal council dismiss its M.O.H., if the majority of the Council so decide?

A.—Previous to the enactment of Section 37 of the Public Health Act, which provides that a medical officer of health may not be removed from office except for cause and with the consent of the Provincial Board, it had become the custom in many municipalities to pass this office around among the local physicians year after year. Under this system there was no prospect of ever securing an efficient medical officer, and physicians appointed to this office bothered themselves very little about it, and in fact in most cases knew little about the duties of such an officer.
By making the M. O. H. a permanent official, independent of local influence and politics, it was hoped to inspire in the appointee some interest in Public Health matters, which certainty of tenure in office was likely to do. For instance, the clerk or the treasurer of a municipality usually holds office indefinitely. Municipal councils have found out that this system has increased the efficiency of such officials; in fact, with the frequent change in the personnel of councils, the new members would be at sea without a clerk or treasurer who knew the routine of municipal affairs. The same is true in respect to sanitary matters, the most important of all municipal questions.

By an amendment (1916) the M. O. H. may, if he neglects his duties, be dismissed by the Provincial Board or by the Council on the recommendation of the Board. The idea of the Legislature was the promotion of efficient service to the municipality. Already its good effects are becoming apparent.

Poisoning by mineral acids may be

For any burning or corrosive poison much help may be given after the vom-

White of egg is particularly helpful in corrosive sublimate poisoning.

Carbolic acid poisoning is difficult to deal with because the anaesthetic effect of the poison prevents the action of the usual emetics. A large drink of whisky or alcohol will help to modify the effects of the acid, and renewed efforts may then be made to induce vomiting. Raw eggs and milk are helpful, but the proper antidote is sodium sulphate.

CLEAN UP A BIT.

To the Editor:—

Napanee's mayor is fairly energetic in looking after the interests of the town in many ways, but we would like to call his attention to one thing which needs looking after badly. A number of merchants, and others, persist in using the streets of the town for the storage of merchandise, old boxes and other unsightly truck, and we think Mr. Mayor should turn his attention that way for a short time, and immensely improve the appearance of our streets. We like to give credit where credit is due, and we should like to be able to congratulate the mayor and council on the clean appearance of our principal streets.

Dr. McKnight, of Everett, Dead.

It was a painful surprise that the friends of Dr. T. W. F. McKnight received on Thursday last when a message reached his relatives in Everett informing them of his death in Bombay, India. The cablegram was as follows:—"Deeply regret inform you Bombay reports Lieut. T. W. F. McKnight, R.A.M.C., died of pyrexia, 5 a.m., September 4th. The Army Council express sympathy.—Sec'y War Office." Dr. McKnight, who practised medicine in Everett for a couple of years before joining the Army Medical Corps, left for England last April and spent some time in training at various centres in England before being put in the service. On June 25th he arrived in India and was assigned to duty in the military hospital at Bombay where he had charge of a ward. Just a few days before the news of his death was received a letter from him reached his mother. He was well at time of writing, working very hard, having taken charge of another ward, the doctor over which was sick. On Tuesday of this week, another letter written August 5th, came to hand. The doctor was well then. Dr. McKnight, although his sojourn in Everett had not been long, had made many friends. He had a great deal of ambition and could not resist the temptation to join the army. His college career was a brilliant one having graduated in arts from Queen's University, Kingston, in 1910, and in medicine in 1912. He was one of a very few physicians holding a certificate from the Dominion Medical Council. Well equipped with a thorough knowledge of all branches of his profession, he was meeting with much success in practice. He was a native of Lennox and Addington county, having been born near Tamworth. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John McKnight, now live in Everett. A sister and brother also survive—Mrs. H. W. McGill, of Everett and Mr. J. F. McKnight of Detroit. Dr. McKnight was a member of Lorne Lodge, A.F., and A.M., Tamworth.

DEATH OF MRS. W. T. GIBBARD.

Annie Anderson, beloved wife of Mr.
W. T. Gibbard, passed away quite suddenly on Tuesday morning. She had been ill for a long time, though not seriously. Mrs. Gibbard's death deprives Grace Methodist church of one of its most active and useful members, and the community as a whole loses an estimable citizen. Mr.
W. T. Gibbard was in the west, on business at the time of his wife's death, but reached Napanee in time for the funeral which took place on Thursday from her late residence to Riverview cemetery.

CASE DISMISSED.

A case of interest to property holders was decided Wednesday in the Division Court before Judge Lavell. W.
T. Waller sued Dr. G. H. Cowan, medical officer of health, for $60 damages.
The defendant, in his official capacity, inspected a house owned by the plaintiff, which, in his opinion, was unsanitary, and ordered it to be cleaned up.
Plaintiff did not clean up these premises, consequently Dr. Cowan hired some men and cleaned up the place;
also he ordered an earth closet on the premises to be pulled down, which was the cause of the law suit. His Honour dismissed the case.

The Red Cross Society

The third annual meeting of the Napanee Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, was held in the town hall, on Saturday afternoon, September 23rd at 3 o'clock.

The meeting opened with a splendid address by the President, Mrs. Grange, who spoke briefly of the grand work that had been done during the past two years. She paid a high tribute to the workers of the Red Cross, emphasizing the fact, that the ladies of the town and country, who have helped us with our work, deserve fully as much praise as the officers and conveners of Committees.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:—

President—Mrs. A. W. Grange.

A TRAVEL TALK.

A pleasant and profitable time was spent in Grace church on Tuesday evening, September 26th. The music, which was furnished by local talent, was of high order. Mrs. M. C. Bogart who has on former occasions given interesting and instructive accounts of her travels, once more, held the attention of her audience while she described her recent visit to Florida and Cuba. She was followed by Mrs. Portland Benson, a former resident of Picton, who has lived for a number of years in Cuba, and who has visited most of the West Indies, and is acquainted with conditions existing in that tropical region. Mrs. Benson speaks the Spanish language, and has a thorough knowledge of the manners and customs prevailing in the land of her adoption, and has also made a study of the more important questions, such as government, etc., and the changes brought since the Cubans gained their independence. She has her subject well in hand, and is a clear and pleasing speaker. When Mrs. Benson makes her next trip north, should she be kind enough to speak to us again, we can assure her a welcome, not only from those who had the pleasure of hearing her, but from many who were unable to be present.

Prisoners' Aid Committee—Mrs. F. S. Wartman.

Princess Patricia Portrait Committee—Mrs. Will Grange.

Refreshment Committee—Mrs. J. W. Robinson.

Auditors—Mesdames Nelson Wagar and J. W. Robinson.

The mite box collectors will be around the last of the week, and on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, October 3rd the Finance Committee will meet at the home of Mrs. C. I. Maybee, when the returns from the boxes will be handed in.

Now that we are starting the third year of our Society, we hope to see many of our workers at the hall Saturday afternoon. Tea will be served and the conveners of the different committees have much work planned. The hall will also be open in the morning for distribution of work.

The Society acknowledges with thanks, the sum of thirty dollars from the Yarker Red Cross Society. This makes a total of one hundred dollars, their donation towards the operating room of the Princess Patricia Convalescent Hospital, at Ramsgate, England.

The Key to the Situation

If you are looking for a situation a Classified Want Ad. is the key which will unlock the door to the private office of the business man. He is too busy to interview all promiscuous callers, but you can catch his attention and secure an appointment by a "Situation Wanted" ad.
